

Baden McNab's OCEAN SAFETY WORKSHOP

New Zealand has a fantastic abundance of marine life, and it is part of our collective heritage to get out and enjoy the moana. It is good for our general wellbeing, fitness and mental health. Unfortunately, snorkellers in New Zealand waters, gathering kai moana and adventuring below the surface, are one of the highest contributors to drownings in New Zealand. Our underwater environment is too good to miss out on, and our families are too important not to come home. This training teaches basic techniques and the core risk management strategies needed to dive safely and come home every time.
