

Once upon a time, there were two best friends, Hollie and the Jacquelyn. They were in their classroom when they saw a shiny new pencil case on their desk. Curious, they opened it and suddenly, they shrunk down to the size of a pencil tip and fell into the case.

At first, they were excited to explore the new world they had found themselves in, but soon they realized they were stuck. The zipper was too big for them to open, and the sides of the case were too steep for them to climb. Panic set in as they wondered how they would get out.

They tried yelling for help, but their tiny voices were no match for the sounds of the classroom. As time passed, they grew hungry and thirsty, but there was nothing to eat or drink inside the case. They huddled together for warmth and comfort, hoping for a miracle.

Finally, after what felt like an eternity, the bell rang and the classroom emptied. The teacher, who had noticed the abandoned pencil case, came back to investigate. She opened the case and found the two small friends huddled together, shivering and scared.

The teacher gently scooped them up and brought them to the nurse's office. There, they were given blankets and warm drinks to help them recover from their ordeal. Though they were grateful to be safe and sound, they never forgot the day they shrunk and got stuck in their pencil case.

From that day on, they looked at every pencil case with a mix of curiosity and fear. They knew they never wanted to experience something like that again, but they also knew that they had each other to rely on no matter what.